

Naar aanleiding van berichtgeving in de landelijke media, vindt u hieronder een persbericht van Rigpa internationaal

21 July 2017

Rigpa is an international network of Buddhist centres dedicated to making the Buddhist teachings of meditation, compassion and wisdom available to the modern world. The courses and programmes offered by Rigpa have helped many thousands of people around the world experience relief from suffering and find meaning in their lives.

We are deeply concerned and saddened to learn of the letter sent by a small group of students to our spiritual director, Sogyal Rinpoche. We would like to state clearly that there is no place for abuse in our community and we are conscious of our responsibility to provide a safe, welcoming and supportive environment for our members and the public.

We respect Sogyal Rinpoche's decision to enter a period of retreat and reflection. During this time Sogyal Rinpoche and Rigpa will seek professional and spiritual advice and look into whatever steps might be necessary. We have already initiated open discussion within our community about the letter and the issues it raises.

In aanvulling op dit bericht, gaat in Nederland onze eerste aandacht nu uit naar de ondersteuning van onze studenten. We organiseren bijeenkomsten voor een open dialoog en gedachtewisseling, waarbij de ontwikkelingen van de laatste weken worden besproken.

We zullen de komende periode gebruiken om ons te beraden over de vervolgstappen die nodig zijn voor onze activiteiten, zoals het programma-aanbod en de organisatiestructuur in Nederland.
